The present invention relates to a variable phase shifting circuit and more particularly to a variable phase shifting circuit of a type which employs a capacitor and an inductor in a three-phase primary circuit. Heretofore, a variable phase shifting circuit using a capacitor and an inductor has been known. In such a circuit, a phase angle of a primary side circuit can be controlled by varying the capacitance of the capacitor and the inductance of the inductor. Generally, such a phase shifting circuit is used in a three-phase generator in which a three-phase primary circuit, a capacitor and an inductor are connected to a three-phase secondary circuit. The three-phase primary circuit is provided with a semiconductor switching element such as an insulated gate bipolar transistor (hereinafter referred to as IGBT), a circuit being constructed in which the capacitor and the inductor are connected in series to the IGBT. In the three-phase primary circuit, with the capacitor not being connected in series to the inductor, that is, with the capacitor being disconnected from the inductor, a current commutated by the IGBT is subjected to a negative resistance effect caused by the inductor in a steady state in which the IGBT is on, thus causing the primary current to assume a negative value. In such a case, there is a problem in that
