Other image-editing programs There are many other programs besides Adobe Photoshop that are worth learning. If your goal is to become a graphic artist, you need to try other editors to see which one you prefer. If you want to learn the basics and try some different editing techniques without spending too much money, Photoshop is a good choice. Photoshop has incredible editing capabilities and can be used for almost any purpose a graphic designer or digital photographer can think of. But it doesn't have many unique tools and doesn't have the capability to create layers and special effects that other programs can offer. If you're just looking to get the basics out of the way, Photoshop is the best choice. To find out more about other image-editing programs, see the following sections. * * * # Differences between Photoshop and GIMP The Adobe Photoshop program and the GNU Image Manipulation Program (GIMP) are very different programs. GIMP is a free program that is similar to Photoshop. Although GIMP is free, it is extremely limited and cannot create professional-quality files. GIMP is not intended to make you a professional graphic designer or photographer. In fact, it is popular with people who want to create basic images for sites such as blogs or social sites. GIMP has a small user base, but it's growing, and many professionals use it. In contrast, Adobe Photoshop is a full-blown image-editing program designed for professionals. It's usually used to create art, posters, logos, and other items that are printed or distributed on paper. It enables you to perform the following: * Image-editing features that are not available in GIMP * Advanced creative effects such as drop shadows and blurs * Adjustments that can be applied to many different elements on an image * Save, print, and export documents I don't suggest that you use GIMP for your projects

We're fortunate to get the days off to sleep in, take pictures and be part of the fun! Our goals for the day are to get both kids to eat breakfast without snacking and to get them into their pajamas without any help from us. All of that is easier said than done. For all of the days with two kids, I've yet to see a day that both kids are sleeping in their pajamas without us waking them up, but we're making progress! Also, on New Year's Day, we plan to visit the New York State Fair. This year's theme is the Earth's Biggest Wave & is happening January 3rd-8th at the New York State Fair in Hornell, NY. One of the exhibits we've always wanted to check out is the Mechanical Wave machine. It's a large display of a large moving wave on water and you can shoot the wave from a cannon and watch it make its way across the track. We're planning to have a blast on Sunday, January 5th and bring our camera along. Enjoy all of the pictures we take on New Year's Day as well as all of our fun summer and fall outings and family moments! Share this: Like this: LikeLoading...
